

Election Capsule

The new council will be composed of three incumbents — Richard Pilski, Gil Weidenfeld, and Charles Schwan — and two newcomers, Thomas White and Richard Castaldi. Pilski will be serving his fifth term, Weidenfeld and Schwan their second. The defeat of incumbent Elizabeth Maffay leaves the council without a woman member for the first time since 1969.

PILSKI, SCHWAN AND WEIDENFELD RE-ELECTED

Weyel and Nelson Chosen For GHI Board Vacancies

by Bob McGee

It was all "peaches and cream" at the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. Board of Directors meeting, Thursday evening, September 13, with the board unanimously zipping through virtually every matter before it. They almost set a record for brevity. Only Thomas White was absent, being present at the candidates night (for city council). The chief items covered were the election of two board members, committee appointments, resale policies, and heating problems.

Robert Nelson, member of the audit committee, and Norman Weyel, former board member, were near unanimous choices to fill the two vacancies on the board of directors. Out of a possible six votes, Nelson received six and Weyel five. Donald Volk and Hugh O'Donnell summed up the expressions of the board by stating that the "quality of the board had been upgraded" with the selection of these two new members. President James Smith appointed Weyel to serve on the Planning, Engineering and Maintenance Committee, and Nelson to serve on the Finance Committee. Both were appointed to the Member Relations Committee.

Money Shortage

A great deal of discussion centered on difficulties in the resale of GHI homes arising from the present shortage of mortgage money. Manager Roy Breashears particularly cited the increase in requests from members for subleasing privileges, even though many of the seller-members are planning to live in the metropolitan area. Under present policy the manager has only been permitting sub-leasing—up to four years, but monitored yearly on a stringent basis—if the member's job requires living outside of the metropolitan area, or locally, only if the job requires living at the place of work (usually the military). It was apparent that the board was concerned that, in any servicing or assignment agreements drawn up by the GHI attorney, both the individual and corporate interest be protected.

Dr. T. C. Byerly was especially concerned that options to purchase might, of themselves, become instruments for speculation in a rapidly inflating housing market, unless GHI itself attaches a prior claim on the option. The board finally decided to advise all members of the present difficulties with regard to financing and to remind them of options open under present policies: 1) members may sub-lease to a purchaser with an option to buy — this option being non-transferable except to GHI; 2) members be encouraged to take back assignments until financing becomes available; and 3) under extreme conditions, and only on an individual basis, the manager can permit sub-leasing by a member who plans to continue living in the area.

Fuel Shortage

Inflation and the energy crisis continued to rock the board. Smith read a letter he had received from Suburban Trust stating they had increased their prime lending rate to 9 3/4% which means that they would now be charging GHI an interest rate of 10 1/4%.

Shortly before this, Breashears expressed his concern about being unable to make accurate projections of fuel oil costs due to the rapid increases, and, worse, could not even guarantee that the corporation would be supplied adequate quantities of fuel oil. The present supplier could make no commitments for #2 oil except on a month-to-month basis, although he was able to secure a commitment for 1,200,000 gallons of #4 oil. In view of this, he stated, he was forced to immediately convert the heating plants for the use of the #4 oil. Heads have been changed on four burners to permit this capacity.

In addition, the board authorized the manager to make expenditures, up to $6,750, to purchase turbulators and electronic burn adjustment equipment, which will help to maintain the fine burning adjustments necessary to economize on fuel and also meet the state environmental requirements.

Other Economies

In other efforts to affect economies, the board, on first readings, voted to authorize the manager to contract with W. Norman Meyer and Associates up to $600 for planning and cost specifications for converting the 12 Ridge Road heating plant from steam to hot water, and up to $500 for development of specifications for modifications of heating regulators in the brick homes. The meeting ended with board members comments, all of which were complimentary of other board members or of the evening's meeting, and a great deal of casual talk after the meeting—almost as if the board didn't know what to do with having wound up a meeting before 10 p.m.

City Recycling Results

In the first twenty weeks of operation under the city of Greenbelt's new refuse collection system in which newspapers are required to be separated from other trash and are collected and sold for recycling, over 260 tons of newspapers have been recycled. This averages over 13 tons a week as compared to 7 1/2 tons a week collected under the previous voluntary program. At this rate of collection over one and one-half acres of newspapers one foot deep will be recycled and not buried in the landfill during the first year of operation. The news papers recycled constitute more than 20% of the household trash collected from refuse containers.

The city has been selling the newspapers for $6 a ton. However, the city was recently advised that the price paid will be increased to $8 a ton and will probably go higher. So far the income from the sale of papers has amounted to about 15c a month per dwelling unit. This income has helped to offset rising salary, landfill and other costs of operation. A longer term cost savings will result from the fact that the useful life of the present landfill used by the city will be extended. The use of another landfill will result in substantially increased costs.

Under the new collection service begun in April, Greenbelt residents subscribing to the refuse collection service receive two collections of household trash, except newspapers, a week instead of three collections. On the third collection day of the former service schedule, the city now collects newspapers. Newspapers must be placed in a paper bag or container placed next to the regular trash container located at the rear or service door. If newspapers are placed in a separate refuse can the can must be clearly identified as containing papers.

The new service has not been problem free. It was instituted at a time when the collection crew was short of men and the city has had continuing problems in keeping a full crew. This has resulted in some customers being missed from time to time. It is believed that customers are more apt to complain of being missed under the new program as missed garbage must be kept for a longer time and storage problems are greater.

Efforts are being made to reduce the complaints. Payrolls for collectors were increased substantially on July 1. Consideration is now being given to an incentive pay plan that will provide extra pay to reliable collectors. The police dispatchers who take telephone complaints maintain a daily log of these complaints. A copy of the log is forwarded to the Public Works Department for followup. Another copy is provided to the City Manager for his personal review.

Mayor Gets High Vote; White And Castaldi Also Winners

Veteran campaigner Richard R. Pilski won his fifth term to office by getting a high vote of 946 in last Tuesday's Greenbelt city council election. The Mayor polled 49 more votes than his nearest rival, Gil Weidenfeld, who was seeking his second term in office.

Only 6 votes separated the second-place winner from the fourth-place. Following Weidenfeld by 4 votes was newcomer Thomas X. White, who in turn beat out by 2 votes incumbent Charles F. Schwan, who was seeking his second term.

The battle for fifth place on the council saw a bunching up of five candidates, with Richard J. Castaldi emerging victorious. His 808 votes were 19 ahead of James O'Sullivan who finished sixth. A major casualty was incumbent council woman Elizabeth K. Maffay, who was seeking her third term. She finished ninth behind John Bogumill and Michael Burchick (See accompany-

CITY NOTES

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission notified the city that they will take up the city's request for denial of a permit to construct the Greenbriar sewage treatment plant on Wednesday, September 26.

The city had two pieces of good news this past week. First it was notified that the state of Maryland was contributing $43,350, in open space funds. The city expects the federal government to contribute the additional $43,350 which will go toward ballfields, recreation center and picnic area at Springhill Lake. All the city expects to pay toward the venture is about $3,500 for an engineering study. The original price the city paid the golf course was $87,500.

The second piece of good news was that the city was the recipient of an award from the Professional Grounds Management Society for the improvement to Southway Road. The society will present the award to the city's parks supervisor, Mr. Doornekamp at its annual conference in Wheeling, West Virginia, September 25.

The general crew patched Springhill Drive in preparation for resurfacing. A load of glass was taken to Baltimore. The city received $4.55 for 45 1/2 lbs. of aluminum from Reynolds Aluminum. Seventeen tons of paper were collected last week, the high number being attributed to the fact that some paper was not collected during the Labor Day holiday.

A new footbridge was installed across the golf course at SHL and two bleachers were moved at Braden Field so spectators could sit during football games.

ing box for votes.)

All of the top vote gatherers pulled over 40% of the vote, thus eliminating the need for a run-off election. O'Sullivan and Bogumill also obtained 40% of the vote.

The 1,934 votes cast represented 54% of the 3,568 registered voters. This was only slightly better than the 53% who turned out for the 1971 city election.

A rundown of the turnout in the respective precincts follows:

	Registered Voters	Votes Cast	%
Center	1,297	763	59
North End	1,274	784	62
Springhill	997	389	39

An analysis of the voting by precinct reveals some interesting patterns. Mayor Pilski, for example, was not the high vote-getter in any of the three precincts but he drew consistently well in all three. White was high man at North End and Castaldi was high man at Center. On the other hand, in Springhill Lake, White and Castaldi finished seventh and tenth, respectively, with O'Sullivan top man.

The new council, which will serve for two years, will hold an organizational meeting on Monday, September 24, at which time the new mayor will be elected. Although the charter is silent on this point, past councils have generally chosen the top vote gatherer.

Hearing on Drug Abuse

The Prince Georges County Drug Advisory Council has scheduled a public hearing to allow citizens to express their concerns about drug abuse and to propose recommendations. The hearing will be held on September 26, at Parkdale Senior High School, at 8 p.m.

Citizens interested in speaking should call Mrs. JoAnn Henningsen, 464-0838.

LWV MEETS

The League of Women Voters of Prince Georges County invites interested persons to a program of informative entertainment about the League. It will be presented at the Greenbelt Library on Tuesday, September 25 at 7:45 p.m. Refreshments will be served, and admission is free.

RHEA COHEN WINS CONTEMPT CASE IN MARYLAND APPEALS COURT

by Al Skolnik

It took nine months, expenditures of over $5,000, and the fund-raising efforts of many citizen groups, but Greenbelt councilwoman Rhea L. Cohen finally received vindication last week when the Maryland Court of Special Appeals ruled that she was not in contempt of court for her part in the Largo sports arena trial. The ruling was hailed as a victory for civil liberties and for the right to speak critically of a judge in a proceeding, if such speech is not disruptive.

The contempt charge had been made by Circuit Court Judge Perry G. Bowen at the close of the December trial when Mrs. Cohen asked that the judge disqualify himself on the grounds of bias and prejudice from a trial challenging construction of the 17,500-seat Capital Centre on 60 acres of parkland near Largo.

Bowen fined Mrs. Cohen $500 and sentenced her to three months in jail after she had read a statement saying that the judge had harassed witnesses and suppressed important information. She was detained for three hours in the Sheriff's custody before being released on bond.

Appeals Court Decision

The Appeals Court, in reversing Judge Bowen, held that Mrs. Cohen had made a good faith motion for disqualification and that the manner of her delivery was not improper. Nor in the opinion of the court was the language sufficient to constitute an "imminent threat to the administration of justice."

The court relied on two recent U. S. Supreme Court decisions which held that the due process right to be heard necessarily embodies a right to file and plead essential issues. Mrs. Cohen had charged that the presiding judge had "unfairly prevented the plaintiffs from entering into the record evidence and testimony essential to (their) case" and of "willfully harassing the plaintiffs" by holding court late at night and on the weekends. Mrs. Cohen had also charged that Judge Bowen had made "an outrageous and false statement in open court" regarding the rights of citizens to take matters to referendum by voters.

Judge Bowen at the trial took exception to these remarks which he regarded as "a direct indication of contempt for this court." He said that her conduct "tends to bring the entire judicial system into contempt and constitutes a clear and present danger to the administration of justice."

The Appeals Court differed. While noting that disqualification motions cannot be made frivolously without good faith, the court concluded that the present case did not constitute such an instance.

Mrs. Cohen's remarks were made after Judge Bowen had solicited comments from those in the courtroom at the end of the trial. At no time while Mrs. Cohen was speaking did the judge caution her that she risked a contempt charge. The brief filed by her attorneys noted that Mrs. Cohen's tone and demeanor in making her statement were respectful and courteous and that her statements had caused no disturbance or other apparent reaction by the spectators in the courtroom.

Present Status

Despite the victory, Mrs. Cohen is still in need of about $1,800 to meet legal fees. The Appeals Court ruled that court costs are to be paid by Prince Georges County, but such costs do not embody lawyers' fees. The trustees for the Rhea Cohen Defense Fund will soon be launching another drive for funds. Mrs. Cohen's lawyers also now need to expunge the criminal contempt citation from the FBI records, which include fingerprinting and mug shots.

Background

Mrs. Cohen was one of the six plaintiffs who sought last December to prevent the use of a portion of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission's parkland for the construction and operation of the Largo sports arena. The plaintiffs had charged that the land had been leased by the Planning Board without due consideration of the potential detrimental effect of the sports complex upon the environment; that the lease was invalid; and that the rental to be paid thereunder by the partnership operating the complex was far below the fair rental value of the property.

Judge Bowen subsequently ruled that the sports arena lease was a valid legal document and that there was no evidence to show the arena would mean a financial loss to taxpayers in Prince Georges county. This decision cleared the way for the construction of the Capital Centre, which is expected to be completed this fall.

Successfully representing Mrs. Cohen in the case were attorneys Stephen H. Sacks, Gregory L. Reed, and Alan Jay Goldstein.

Ms. Cohen Replies

To the Editor:

Twenty-eight days after being appointed election judge, just two weeks before election day, two days after I wrote to the News Review about Marcia Krasnick's being a candidate's campaign treasurer—she called the City to decline her appointment as election judge.

On August 13, the city council announced her appointment along with others with the understanding that she had agreed to serve, and that week's News Review reported the appointments. She had ample time to decline before Labor Day, when her name appeared on election campaign literature.

by Punchin' Judy

Through the years I have been haunted by the image of "The Other Judy." In high school I was puzzled for a number of weeks by people saying to me, "Oh, you're the other Judy." I finally discovered that a very active Judy had graduated the year before I entered and her name was almost a legend. This, of course, practically forced me to make a name for myself in school. I think I succeeded (in ways not always wholly acceptable to the teachers), because the year after I graduated I learned that a new girl was being called "the other Judy". Incidentally, I did finally get to meet my predecessor. A student nurse, she held the basin for me as I was coming out of ether after an operation. "Oh," we both said simultaneously. "You're the other Judy."

At one time I had a friend who was enamored of Judy Garland. This seemed harmless enough, although actually I have always preferred the cowardly lion. However, one day this ex-friend referred to me as "the other Judy". Our friendship became hopelessly strained when I pointed out that Miss Garland, talented as she was, had started out in life as Frances Gumm, so that it was she who was "the other Judy."

Now there are any number of "other Judys." Each of the Washington papers has one, doing columns similar to this one. But remember, folks, we were first, right here in the Greenbelt News Review. There's an Erma, too, in one of the Washington papers, but I really don't know how to fit her into this story, so please forget that I mentioned her.

I have never had the pleasure of meeting these ladies, but then they've never had the privilege of meeting their counterpart in our illustrious publication. However, in this month's "Washingtonian Magazine" there are letters to the editor both from myself and one of the "other Judys". There is also a letter from Barry Goldwater, but I don't know how to fit that into the story, either.

FIRST FEDERAL SAVINGS says

is a lot of money to waste

That's what "paying later" with a credit card can cost you. That's what "buying later" with the saved up cash can save you.

Truth in Spending. When you use a credit card to buy things, you're using someone else's money. And they're going to get paid for it. So after a month, they start collecting interest from you at the rate of 18% per annum.

Join the cash savers instead. Put off buying for a few months, and get ready. Pay money into your own Savings Account, or "Spending Account", as systematically as though you were paying a credit card debt. As you're saving up, we'll be paying you 5¼%* Add the 5¼% we're paying you to the 18% you're not paying to them, and you find you've given yourself a nice 23¼% discount for being wiser.

And while you're at it, maybe the store will give you a cash discount—which is something else you'll never get with a credit card. Open your Savings Account this week, and make as many withdrawals as you wish from your new Spending Account.
